| DVB-C und DVB-T kann editiert werden: | Channel sorting                    |
|                                       | Change channel names               |
|                                       | Set favorite channels              |
|                                       | Set skips and locks                |
|                                       | Channel deletion                   |
|                                       | Renumbering the whole channel list |

Important you need to enable hotel mode and after that change hotel menu option DTV Update to manual. There aren't any known downsides of enabling hotel mode yet.

It's possible to allow everything there so you won't notice a difference to disabled hotel mode operation at all.

If you refuse to enable hotel mode the channels you have deleted will reappear at the end of your sorted list again and renamed channels will be reset to their broadcasted names.

Advices which I think are important:

Export a clean TLL file from your TV for every editing job, you never know which settings are in there additionally to those I've decrypted so far for use in my TLLeditor (might get lost and render the TV unusable).

Always set hotel mode (now also available to change inside the TLL editor).

ALWAYS KEEP A BACKUP!!!

I can't be held responsible for ANY damage my program does to your TV due to wrong configuration or mistakes in your configuration or my program code.

You (the user of edankTLL) are fully responsible for the modifications you apply to your TV by using this piece of software and its outcomes (successful or not).
